

Documentation for SeniorDesignRoom

My apologies professor, who whoever may pick this up after me, I didn't get a chance to really organize it properly, but hopefully I can explain it well enough.

Line by line:

- The two scripts at the top are givens for a-frame and a-frame extra.
- The four assets are the pictures for the carpet, soundboard, the quad chart, and the senior design demo.
- The carpet is just a massive square the covers the whole room.
- The north wall is split four ways to create a sort of window.
- Each section is essentially doubled because of the lower and upper half of the wall being two different colors.
- The East wall is a little disorganized. All together, the east wall contains the short wall, the north short wall, and the east wall juttred out along with the soundboard wall fuzz.
- South wall is roughly normal. Nothing really special about it.
- South facing short wall is the little extension off of the north wall.
- West wall is completely plain.
- Wall behind the windows is the thing that the quad chart is sitting on.
- Quad chart is quad chart.
- The five lines of sound board are the pieces on the wall that look fuzzy.
- There are technically a pair of whiteboards within each one, thus four lines.
- The TV has a black box, a plane/video in front of it slightly smaller than the box, and a cylinder 'TV wall mount' on the back.
- Ceiling is the ceiling.
- And then the camera, pretty much a constant.

Hopefully that described each line enough, it may look short, but positioning took the longest with all of these pieces, I'm pretty happy with the final result though.
